FOREST FIRES.

SEVERAL VILLAGES DESTROYED.

Hundred and Fifty People Dependent on Charity. Fires Still Burning.

Maine, June 19.—The first news of the fires in the Maine woods was received in this city yesterday morning, when the train from Bangor arrived with the usual mail and express matter. Not a single wire and that used by the Press dispatches filed to-day in regard to the fires in the woods did not arrive until yesterday afternoon, only a little in advance of the regular mail. Accurate news of the extent of the fires will be greater than estimated yesterday.

The fires are raging in Aroostook county, Maine, and Wisconsin.

PUEBLO'S POSTMASTER.

A Sensational "White Wing" Receives the Appointment.

Pueblo, June 19.—The long drawn out fight over the Pueblo postmastership came to a sensational [illegible] when Postmaster-General Bissell was induced to do by giving telegrams at him at all hours of day and night, left it out in the cold and so are all other gentlemen who were against Thomas Thompson, who drew the prize to-day.

Thomas Thompson was born in New Orleans, La., Nov. 20, 1850. He attended the public schools till 1871, when he entered his father's office, remaining there until 1881. He came to Colorado in that year and accepted a clerical position with the Colorado Coal and Iron company. Afterwards he was a clerk in the Denver and Rio Grande freight office, resigning to accept a position as deputy county clerk under Dan Stewart.

He was elected in 1886 as county clerk. He served two terms and was defeated for renomination. He went to New Orleans for a few months and since has been [illegible] a newspaper for [illegible].

Mr. Thompson is an unwavering White Wing and he received the support of County Chairman White of the only Democratic ticket, straight White Wing, that of A. B. McKinley. He did not pick either Democratic support and had none. He is [illegible] of retiring disposition and has many friends. By all odds he was the most popular of the eight or nine White Wing candidates in the field, the only other Democrat running being Colonel Stover. The [illegible] received eight votes [illegible].

Mr. Thompson is quite well known in Colorado Springs and [illegible] on the appointment were [illegible] and [illegible] Attorney Bell, R. J. Evans, and [illegible] are [illegible] with Mr. Thompson. He is a strong man of good ability and character. I endorse the appointment as [illegible].

APPROPRIATION FOR FIREMEN.

Various Reports Accepted and Several Bills Allowed—Arrears to be Opened Cheyenne Park Gold Proposition.

At the city council meeting last night Alderman Dunbar introduced a resolution appropriating $1,000 for the use of the Chamber of Commerce the same to be taken from the contingent fund and that a report [illegible] be published. It is understood that the money is for use in advertising the city.

Alderman Finegan thought we not right to appropriate the money [illegible] had previously been appropriated for the Fourth of July celebration. He objected to putting "the city on paper."

The Mayor asked the council [illegible] to appropriate the money for purposes such as the [illegible].

The City Attorney stated that as he had [illegible] before the [illegible] corporations were [illegible] especially of corporations of [illegible] them had not been [illegible] a cent or cannot. Last year $400 was appropriated.

The Mayor and Chief [illegible] thought it was too much.

Alderman Hoffman wanted the $500 for Fourth of July appropriated, but opposed Alderman Dunbar thought the celebration [illegible] as important as the $500. He voted [illegible].

WANTED NOW.

The City Council is fully aware of the water situation, as it has been for some time past, but for some reason there is a long delay in supplying the want with any permanent measures of relief. We would respectfully suggest to the Council that action is needed, not next fall or next month, but now.

The Council is aware, too, as the public in general are not, how serious the situation is in case of fire. They are in possession, we believe, of the second part of the joint committee's report, dealing with the question of fire protection and the fire department, a part of the report that has never been published. If they know, even better than the general public, that the case is a very urgent one. New mains should be placed at once, for the extension of the present system, and meantime such arrangements should be made for sprinkling as will not cause a shut-off of the supply in houses during the sprinkling hours.

This is a matter that is essential to the comfort and the health of our citizens and the safety of their property. Now is the time to attend to it.

THE "ONE MENACE."

No longer ago than last fall, Democratic orators and newspapers, especially in the East, were telling the people that the one menace to the prosperity of this country was the McKinley act. The Democratic platform denounced the act in the most vigorous terms, Mr. Cleveland announced that he was consecrated to the task of Tariff Reform, and the party was pledged, as firmly and absolutely as ever a party was pledged to anything, to an immediate repeal of the "robber tariff."

Now Mr. Cleveland gravely announces to the country that the one menace to its prosperity is the Sherman silver act. This announcement is certainly an indirect statement that the tariff is not a "menace." It indicates a very decisive change in Mr. Cleveland's attitude. It seems to go far to prove that after all he is not a prophet. It suggests, to every thinking man, that if Mr. Cleveland was wrong about the "one menace" last fall, perhaps he may be wrong now.

We suspect that he is wrong. The whole history of this country proves that periods of tariff agitation and uncertainty are not periods of prosperity. Indeed, they cannot be. Manufacturers are not going to extend their plants, or put money into new enterprises, when they realize that within a year or two the tariff on their product may be lowered or taken off altogether. A period of tariff agitation is necessarily a period of contraction, and affects all business, manufacturing and other. Even if our gold reserve were not below $100,000,000, even if the government were not obliged by law to buy a large amount of silver each month, business would not be apt to be in an especially flourishing condition, with the menace of free trade hanging over the country. In fact, when the situation is analyzed, it appears that the real trouble with business is not so much any law now existing as the fact that we have a Democratic administration and a Democratic Congress, and nobody knows what they are going to do.

In other words the "one menace" to the prosperity of the country is Mr. Cleveland's party.

OPEN ON SUNDAY.

Chief-Justice Fuller, sitting in Circuit Court of Appeals, has decided that the Fair shall be open on Sundays—at any rate that is the practical effect of his decision over-ruling the injunction granted by Justice Woods against Sunday opening. An appeal might be taken to the full bench of the Supreme Court, but if it were, the case could not be decided until after the Fair is over.

It is a decision to the potion that the agitation in favor of Sunday opening should have resulted in this way; and in particular it is most fortunate to the Chicago Directory, who accepted the government appropriation with the condition of Sunday closing annexed, and ever since have used every effort in their power to break faith with the United States.

In the minds of a great many good people the question will at once arise whether it is right to go to the Fair at all now that Sunday opening is to be put into effect. This is a question which everyone must decide for himself, even as he must decide whether it is right for him to ride on week days on a street railway that runs cars on Sunday. Many good people will not ride in any public conveyance on Sunday. Many others, perhaps, justify it on Christian use the street cars to go to church.

This is a question upon which the religious papers are divided. The Sunday School Times, for instance, thinks that Christian people should "boycott" the Fair and do all they can to make it a failure. The Christian Union, on the other hand, believes that such a course would be a great mistake. We believe the majority of church members will endorse the latter position. By attending the Fair on week days they will certainly not be doing anything to make Sunday opening a success. By staying away they will deprive themselves of much pleasure and profit, and will increase the week-day attendance. It seems hardly necessary that Christian people should punish themselves and injure a grand national enterprise, for the sake of administering a rebuke which probably will not be felt to a few men in Chicago who have a defective sense of honor.

Still, there will be many good people who will stay away, because their consciences will not allow them to go. It is a matter entirely between individuals, and it seems after looking over the case, with all the light he can get, resolves that it would be wicked for him to go, he will do well to stay at home.

Summer schools are more popular than ever this year. One of the most remarkable of the new ones is that of the Roman Catholics at New London, Conn., towards the expenses of which $5000 were subscribed in less than 1½ hours one day last January. Chautauqua is returning to pre-eminence in summer resort attractions in the United States. Too much cannot be said, our own Summer school is far ahead of all others in every way, and bids fair to have a most successful season in all respects.

Mr. Conrad N. Jordan, Sub-Treasurer at New York, to whom the announcement when he assumed his office that no despatch would be made except for inefficiency, is now turning out Republicans and putting in Democrats at the rate of some half dozen a day. The reason he gives is that the places are wanted for Democrats. This at least is frank, and an improvement on Cleveland's method in the Custom House.

The time of year has now arrived when forest fires are prevalent. The first large one of the season is also one of the worst on record. A strip of forest country in northern Minnesota and Wisconsin, [illegible] miles long, has been burned over, and several new towns have been entirely destroyed. So far as reported the loss of life has been small, but the value of property destroyed is probably at least a million dollars.

The National Association of Train Dispatchers are making a tour of the State and Utah. They are scheduled at Salt Lake City to-day, and are expected here on Friday morning. They will go up the Peak Saturday morning.

Maxwell is still swinging his ax. The average of fourth-class postmasters dismissed every day is over a hundred. Hurrah for Reform!

Utterly Demoralized.

The Populists have been in power in Colorado less than six months, and yet it is a fact patent to all observers that every department of the government in which their control is supreme is utterly demoralized and practically worthless. This is especially true of the Fire and Police departments of Denver. If Governor Waite wants to serve the people of this city a good turn he will discharge all his Populist appointees and select good Republicans of proved honesty and fitness to take their places.—Denver Republican.

Won His Way With Logan Carlisle.

Every official in Washington just now is besieged by people in quest of office, and the treasury department has probably more than its share of them. Officials know how it is themselves, however, and their good nature is almost superhuman. Among the callers [illegible] anced ones is Logan Carlisle, chief clerk of the treasury, and to him came a youth from Indiana, who wanted to know about a place that he had in view.

"It's this way," said the young man after some talk. "I'm like the young man who had his leg cut off by a locomotive."

"How's that?" inquired Logan.

"I'm in need of immediate attention."

"Oh, in that case," laughed Logan, "you'd better go to the Emergency hospital."

"Well," exclaimed the youth, making a low bow, "here I am." And Logan agreed on the spot to attend to his needs at the earliest opportunity.—Washington Cor. Chicago Herald.

Mrs. Stanford's Jewels.

Apropos of jewels, the handsomest in Washington is the collection owned by Mrs. Leland Stanford, wife of the millionaire senator from California. Her diamonds are second only in value to the Russian and English crown jewels. They are of all tints: one pink, another yellow, one blue, besides the pure white stones, and the aggregate value is estimated as being over $2,000,000. In Mrs. Stanford's safe of steel, with time-proof burglar-locks, which, as she seldom wears her jewels, is kept at a safe deposit company, are 50 diamond rings, each worth about $50. She cares for no other stones, so there are only diamonds in her collection.—Washington News.

"Assistant Pastor."

"Assistant pastor" is a new title for a woman and one not to be so far-held by only one under this name. The pioneer in this field finds her home and work in Brooklyn, where, at a salary of $400 a year, she relieves the pastor of many routine duties that in a large city parish unwarrantably consume his time and energy. The office might better be called "pastor's wife's assistant," for its work is taking a direct burden from the shoulders of those long suffering women.

A BEAUTIFUL WORK.

What the Ministering Children's League is Doing in This City.

This organization was formed in 1887 by the Countess of Meath, at her home in London. This clever, gifted, philanthropist desired that a solution of some of the questions now troubling society would not be accomplished save by enlisting and training the children in the service of humanity, and developing the sense of responsibility in the child-mind.

The objects of the league are as follows: To promote kindness, unselfishness and the habit of self-forgetfulness among children, and to create in their minds an earnest desire to help the needy and suffering. To aid necessities of the poor by supplying them with warm clothing, comforts, etc.

The rule of the league is that "each member must try to do at least one kind deed every day."

The prayer of the league, which is to be

Father, while we like the Holy Child Jesus, a ministering child, love to kind, and useful to others. Teach me to feel for the poor and suffering, and may I be ready to do what I can to help those who are in need.

[illegible] not a secret society.

Children of all ages, rich, poor, and ignorant, are earnestly requested to become associates. One of the aims of the league is to bring together, on a basis of common work, the children of the rich and the poor. No membership fee is required of the children, but associates pay an annual due of [illegible] cents. There are [illegible] of such associates in the British Isles, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, Jerusalem, Valparaiso, and South Africa, while in the United States alone there are over eight hundred branches.

Amongst them all there has been no report equal to that of the Colorado Springs branch, whose first "annual report" is just printed. It was organized in Grace Church vestry last June, and has now [illegible] members, not all of whom, however, belong to the Episcopal Church, other denominations being represented as well. It is hoped that public notice may be awakened in the work by the children and do that the number of members both associate may both increase. Persons may join at the monthly meetings, which are held the first Tuesday in each month in Grace Church vestry, at half past four o'clock.

[illegible] ANNUAL MEETING OF THE [illegible] MINISTERING CHILDREN'S LEAGUE.

Sixty-[illegible] families provided with Thanksgiving dinner.

Fifty-four [illegible] received Christmas boxes and candy.

Box of clothing sent to home missionary valued at $25, and $5 given to Colorado City mission at Exeter.

Eight hundred and ninety-seven periodicals distributed, besides picture cards, fruit and flowers, and numerous other donations of which no account has been kept.

Breach of Promise Case.

First, there was the engagement. Hank Stevens, good looking and rich, a dry goods merchant and a middle aged bachelor. Almiry Smith, a little dressmaker in the post-office. "What luck!" the girls all said when they saw her with Uncle Hank's team of prize boys. And the little thing folded her hands as if to be happy.

[illegible] She had struck early in the season of love, and she did love somebody else. She was marrying him to help her family out of the [illegible]

She had about made up her mind that she couldn't marry Hank after all, and wondering how she would be able to tell him and [illegible] heart, when he threw himself on her mercy, and said he didn't love her and would be doing an awful wrong to marry her and offered to settle a [illegible] promise without judge or jury by paying her $10,000 damages for her affections in spot cash.

Almiry was so surprised at this carrying of the war into the enemy's camp that she nearly fainted.

"Poor girl, how she loves me," thought Hank.

"Ten thousand dollars isn't to be sneezed at," thought Almiry, but she looked sad and distressed as if it were a cheap plaster for a broken heart.

But she accepted sure, and even said confidentially to Hank:

"I'll spend it all in your store, so you'll get it all back again."

And she did. She bought her trousseau there when she married the other fellow.—Detroit Free Press.

The Third Time Did It.

Saturday night chanced to be one of the nights when the "gentle king" beloved from pole to pole," was unpleasant, unwilling to come to me. "Late Saturday night" had passed into the wee small hours of Sunday morning, and "tired nature's sweet restorer" was just beginning to draw near, when she was driven far away again by SOUNDS from the next room—loud and long, continued and oft repeated [illegible] despair, knowing too well that sleep would never be wafted to me by such strains, suddenly the thought of something I had read in the morning came to my mind. Rather timidly I knocked three times on my bedstead. The sounds from the sleeper faltered a little for a minute, then became as strong as ever. Feeling slightly encouraged I got out of bed and rapped (but, alas! rapped lightly) on the wall.

I hated to actually awaken the unconscious offender. No result followed, and I went back to bed, trying to lose myself in Dreamland's pleasures. But after a time my patience failed me utterly. Springing from my bed in desperation I caught up my slipper, and with its heel knocked on the wall three times—knocked slowly, firmly, deliberately. Silence, complete, profound silence, followed the third knock.

Almost awe stricken, I returned to my bed, trembling for a few minutes, half expecting some [illegible] to my door to see if my knocks were a signal of distress. But no one came. No one was aroused, quiet reigned, and soon I slept.—Cor. Boston Journal.

The Stick Indians of Alaska.

The name of Stick Indians is loosely applied to all those natives of Interior Alaska living near the coast range of mountains. They are a people but little known to the whites, for but few travelers have ever visited them, and hundreds of them today have never seen a white face. Living with in 20 or 30 miles of the coast settlements yet separated from them by lofty mountains, they [illegible] without meeting any white people save when some curious explorer like Glave or Schwatka or some intrepid hunter has chosen to assess them, or when a few of their leading men make an occasional visit to the coast, under the guardianship and strict surveillance of their Chilkat business manager.

Their industry most interesting to the outside world is hunting, and the quantity of furs sent out, by them is not inconsiderable. They consist principally of marten, mink, beaver, otter, fox and bear skins. Early in the spring the Indians from the village of Ishkik and neighboring villages bring their furs down to the village of Wrangel Island, which is situated on one of the streams among the bayous of the Alaska river. They come because they are short of food, and here are their catches of fish left on the preceding year. After remaining for a few weeks some of them go back for a few weeks' hunting, while others remain until the salmon begin to run, which is about the 1st of June. By the time these Stick families have come up the river in canoes of the river the hunters have all returned and 200 or 300 Indians are ready to begin putting up their supply of fish.—Alaska Journal.

There is considerable discussion and some feeling among the firemen regarding the result of the races at the Country club on Saturday. The El Paso bank opened for business yesterday in the new quarters. The officers and employees looked smilingly out on their patrons from their new and shining fixtures.
